The Mysterious Grave

By Mrs. C. C. Deagan.

Three years ago as a guest of my friend, Mrs. Maxwell, I was at Portmouth. I was accompanied by a fourteen-year-old granddaughter. One day my hostess, my granddaughter and I took the trolley line for Sciotoville. I was anxious to again visit the scenes of my childhood, and especially to stand by the mysterious grave. I could scarcely realize the many changes I met with on this trip—every turn brought a fresh surprise. The trolley line occupied the old roadway. An immense machine shop stood where once gay picnic parties gathered and danced happy hours away. Mun's Run was no more, and the place where it once meandered through wide-spreading trees was now "Millbrook Park," with a lake and charming buildings for every form of recreation and amusement. We passed a new city, a new "Boston," where fifty years ago were a few widely separated farm houses.

Sciotoville—could it be possible—no longer a village, not even a town, but a thriving city with great business interests. I found it difficult to locate old landmarks. The Price Hotel was gone, not a vestige of it remained. Front Street was gone. The river had encroached to the door-yards of the few remaining houses, and being very high at this time, it was flapping its muddy waters under one corner of the house, where as a child I had lived. I peeped into the side-yard, where the grape arbor had been, and saw, not the harbor and rustic seat as of old, but sights that sadly blurred my precious memory-pictures.

When I inquired for names of friends of long ago, people stared, as at Rip Van Winkle, saying: "No such people in town." We went on toward the bridge. Near it was the Farney home, which still retained its wide sweep of park. Surely some of the family would be there—I found the house dilapidated and empty. The Ellison home, across the way, was gone. A new one was there, occupied by strangers. I learned from a lady there that Mrs. Farney had passed away two years ago and the place was for sale; also that a married daughter, Mrs. S., lived somewhere downtown.

The bridge looked natural, so did the banks of the little river. The mountain still towered in majestic grandeur, but—Oh, the graveyard! I stopped for a moment and another of my most treasured memory-pictures was forever blurred. How desolate and forlorn. There was the debris of a once-upon-a-time saw mill just beyond, and piles of old lumber were scattered about, even infringing on the sacred spot. A rude fence separated it from the mountain, and an unsightly mud road intervened. I looked for the mysterious grave, and thought it was gone—but—no, there is the freestone base, but tered, bruised and broken, and almost overgrown with grass and weeds, but where is the railing? Echo answered "where."

We walked on and even the wind as it came softly stepping down the mountain seemed to whisper "forgotten." I found one familiar name that brought to mind the gentle-voiced coroner, "Smith." The grave was near a tree of good size, which mutely testified that he had been long at rest. On the stone was a beautiful etching of a pioneer scene, rather lately made, which spoke of "remembrance," from some one. I bowed reverently at this grave and was glad it was tree-sheltered. We passed on through The Narrows, now a wagon road, and on, till we had stood the forest primeval, we saw fields were cattle were feeding. A few stunted ferns grow here and there along the roadway.

Slowly we retraced our steps. We found Mrs. S.—a charming woman, as her mother had been. I remembered her as a lovely babe. She remembered many of the old residents, saying: "They are most all buried in the new cemetery back of town." Yes, she remembered the mysterious grave, and knew of its despoiling. The picturesque spot had retained its beauty through her own days of maidenhood, and was often termed "Lovers' Retreat," and The Narrows were still the favorite walking place for the townspeople.

Several years later a syndicate bought the fine timber behind the mountain. The Narrows were widened into a wagon road. By hugging the mountain closely, curving sharply to the left, they could reach their sawmill without a visible trespass on the graveyard. One day a team of oxen became unruly at the sharp curve and ran straight ahead right into the graveyard and upset their wagon with its load, a heavy log, on the mysterious grave. The railing was broken in pieces. The base was broken somewhat, but retained its position, no one for years had paid any attention to it, and no one knew whose it was, so the mill men had the pieces of railing gathered up and placed inside the base, and nothing was ever said about it. After the "runaway" the rude fence had been built. The mill had years ago closed out and gone, and most every one had forgotten about the circumstances. She had not for years thought of it "till I came with my questions."

What matters to those brave pioneers, these noble, unselfish citizens of the village of long ago, so quietly resting there on the hazy banks of Little Scioto?

Forgotten they may be, yet they remain faithful, guarding the stranger sleeping in their midst, 'till Resurrection Morn.

The lofty mountain shelters them. The south wind whispers a lullaby as they sweetly sleep, the sleep that knows no waking.

RESULTS TELL

There Can Be No Doubt About the Results in Maysville.

Results tell the tale. All doubt is removed. The testimony of a Maysville citizen can be easily investigated.

What better proof can be had? Mrs. Della Lunsford, 328 E. Front street, Maysville, Ky., says: "I attributed my kidney trouble to a strain. There were sharp, shooting pains through my kidneys and a dragging down feeling through my hips. I had dull headache and dizzy spells and often if I had not caught hold of something for support, I would have fallen. I was in that condition for several years, up one week and in bed the next. I finally began to notice symptoms of dropsy, and in a short time I was suffering from that trouble. My feet began to swell and my hands were at times the same way. At night I was restless and always felt tired. I read of a similar case being cured by Doan's Kidney Pills and I got a supply at Wood & Son's Drug Store. They relieved me so much from the first that I got another supply and before long I was completely and permanently cured. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. I am glad to confirm my former endorsement of this remedy."

PASTOR ACCEPTS CALL.

Mt. Sterling, Ky., March 30.—(Special).—The Christian church congregation here has extended a call to the pastorate of the church to the Rev. Clyde Dorsie, of Jacksonville, Ill. The Rev. Dorsie has accepted and will assume his labors May 1st.

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION

Important to Everyone.

It is now conceded by physicians that the kidneys should have more attention as they control the other organs to a remarkable degree and do a tremendous amount of work in removing the poisons and waste matter from the system by filtering the blood.

During the winter months especially, when we live an indoor life, the kidneys should receive some assistance when needed, as we take less exercise, drink less water and often eat more rich heavy food, thereby forcing the kidneys to do more work than Nature intended. Evidence of kidney trouble, such as lame back, annoying bladder troubles, smarting or burning, brick-dust or sediment, sallow complexion, rheumatism, may be weak or irregular heart action, warns you that your kidneys require help immediately to avoid more serious trouble.

Many physicians claim that an herbal medicine containing no minerals or opiates has the most healing influence. An ideal herbal compound that has had most remarkable success as a kidney and bladder remedy is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root by Parcells Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention the Maysville Daily Public Ledger.

CARLOAD OF NEW POSTOFFICE SCALES.

Postmaster W. B. Smith, of Lexington, was somewhat surprised when he received a carload of postoffice scales, containing altogether 715 of the weighing machines. Each of the scales weighs eight pounds and is designed to draw 100 pounds.

All of these new scales, however, will not be used in the Lexington postoffice, as Postmaster Smith, along with the shipment, received instructions to ship them out as rapidly as possible to numerous postoffices in Central and Eastern Kentucky.

WE WANT THE NEWS.

When you have a little item, SEND IT IN—There is no time like the present to begin; We'll appreciate it too—Just like we always do—If you'll promptly send your little item in.

When you hear that something's happened, MAIL IT IN—It will only take two pennies worth of tin; You'll feel better every day All along life's rugged way, If you'll think about the printer, so begin.

If you know of any news note PHONE IT IN—It will make us smile from forehead down to chin; It will drive away the blues When your neighbor reads the news, So phone your local paper—phone it in.

When you hear of some occurrence STEP RIGHT IN—We will greet you with a "howdy" and a grin; For we like to print the news And 'twill save our only shoes If we do not have to chase the items in.—W. B. Shown, Minco, Oklahoma, Minstrel.

STRENGTH FOR OLD PEOPLE

A Simple Remedy Which Favors Longevity.

You act as though you just wondered how you are going to get through this trying season and do your work. You may be overworked or have had a bad cold which has left you without strength, ambition or much interest in life; in fact you are all run-down.

Let us tell you that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron tonic, is just the remedy you need to rebuild wasting tissues and replace weakness with strength.

A prominent Boston lawyer says: "My mother, who is 76 years of age, owes her good health to Vinol as since taking it she can walk farther and do more than she has for years. I consider it a wonderful blood-making and strength-giving tonic."

We have such faith in Vinol that if it does not quickly build you up, restore your strength and make you feel well again, we will return your money. Try Vinol on our guarantee. J. C. PECOR, Druggist.
